

Calling All Ceremony Sites & Officiants

First you need to find a ceremony site. Religious options include notable local churches, your current church or temple, your parents' church or synagogue, a house of worship you're interested in joining as a married couple, a military chapel (if one or both of you is in the service), or a college chapel (at your alma mater). For civil sites, the sky's the limit.

Find an officiant if your site is not a house of worship. For a civil wedding, contact city, town, or village halls and ask about judges or justices of the peace available for weddings. If you have no connection to a specific church but want an officiant of a certain denomination to perform your ceremony, ask friends and/or search for one online at www.TheKnot.com/local for names of churches and synagogues. Try nondenominational or interfaith officiants. (These officiants will perform ceremonies at nonreligious sites.)

Make appointments with several sites and/or officiants (unless you're marrying in your own house of worship and the decision is a given):

Location: _____

Address: _____

Officiant: _____

Phone: _____

Fee: _____

App't date: ___ / ___ / ___ Time: _____

Available dates: ___ / ___ / ___ ___ / ___ / ___

Notes: _____

Location: _____

Address: _____

Officiant: _____

Phone: _____

Fee: _____

App't date: ___ / ___ / ___ Time: _____

Available dates: ___ / ___ / ___ ___ / ___ / ___

Notes: _____

Officiant: _____

Phone: _____

Fee: _____

App't date: ___ / ___ / ___ Time: _____

Available dates: ___ / ___ / ___ ___ / ___ / ___

Notes: _____

Officiant: _____

Phone: _____

Fee: _____

App't date: ___ / ___ / ___ Time: _____

Available dates: ___ / ___ / ___ ___ / ___ / ___

Notes: _____

